Five Days After Theft of North Stonington Horse and

The Westerly police received notice that a horse and carriage had been stolen from the barn of James Cook in Pendleton Hill, in the town of North Stonington, and adjoining Westerly. In the meantime the horse thief had ample oportunity to dispose of the outfit, and without the knowledge of the local police it could have driven through Westerly to New London to be shipped to New York by boat, without interference on the part of any Westerly when information of the theft was ceived it came from the Connecticut state police department, the delay indicating that there was slow report made to the state police. Deputy Sheriff Casey of Pawcatuck and the Westerly police were notified of the theft at the sum time.

The saimal stolen was a brown mare weighing about $50 pounds. The carriage running gear was painted red, and the wheels were rubber tired.

The icemen here and hereabouts have had their harvest season, which was embraced to the limit, and the icehouses were filled. So with a large stock on hand and the selling season not due, they could look complacently upon the severe snow storm that presented Friday. Apart from the teamupon the severe snow storm that pre-valled Friday. Apart from the team-ing, all outside work was suspended. Friday afternoon teh strong easterly wind was kicking up a choppy sea, and if the force continued. Captain Davis of the life saving station was of opin-ion that there would be a big surf at Watch Hill tealer (Saturday). Watch Hill today (Saturday).

A sharp lookout for vessels in distress was kept by the surfmen as they patrolled the beach all through the dreary night. A clear case of looking for something they did not want to find.

Constable Charles P. Ecclestone lost in his liquor case brought before Judge Oliver H. Williams in the Third district court at Westerly on Friday. Mr. Ecclestone testified that he had searched the premises of Herbert Brown, of Canonchet, in the town of Hopkinton, Dec 19 last, and found several bottles containing small quantities of intoxicating liquors and a barrel containing ating liquors and a barrel containing sincteen gallons of wine. He saw many impty bottles and some glasses, two of which were near the barrel of wine.

which were near the barrel of wine. His testimony was corroborated by Hugh Ecclestone and Oscar Wells, who assisted in the search.

Mr. Brown, on whose premises the liquors were found, testified that the bottles were brought to the house by boarders, and that Fred Perrin made and owned the wine that was selzed. He swore that he had not violated the liquor law. A sister of the witness testified in corrobration.

Fred Perrin testified that the barrel selzed was owned by him and that he purchased it in Wyoming. The wine it NOVEL EELING. Sport at Essex Watching Ducks at Their Fishing.

There has been great sport at the river front at Essex for the past few days, says the Middledown Press, watching wild ducks on what is known as the Middle Ground above the steamboat dock diving down into the water being free of ice after eels. One duck would disappear under water for some little time and then appear on the surface with an eel in his bill, and no sooner done than a seagull which was hovering over in midair would scoop down and take the eel out of the duck's bill and disappear in flight on to Great Meadow for an eel dinner. One after another of the ducks would go down for eels and the guils would take them as fast as they could catch them, and such a squawking you never heard, among the feathered tribe.

One gull had his hands full when he grabbed a monster eel that would weight several pounds from a duck. A friend, knowing how I was troubled, one guil had his hands full when he grabhed a monster eel that would weigh several pounds from a duck, having all the eel he wanted to carry in flight for the meadow land, for safety. The nir was full of guils and it was a pretty sight to see them flying about, watching the wild ducks eel catching for them to eat. Once in a while a duck was too much for the while a duck was too much for the gull and would swallow the eel before the bird could get it, getting on to the gull trick of stealing them before he could make a swallow of it for his own stomach's sake.

BRIDE DIVORCED. Hence Bridgeport Clergyman Refused to Tie the Knot.

R. W. Goodyear, aged 33, of North Haven, who told Tax Town Clerk
Thomas of Bridgeport that he was a musical dealer, secured a license Wednesday afternoon to wed Miss Mary Burdick, a pretty brunette of 35 years,
The Lee & Osgood Co

who said she came from New Britain. When they presented themselves to Rev. Gerald H. Beard, pastor of the Park street Congregational church, Bridgeport, the clergyman noted that the license stated the bride had been divorced. He asked the bride if she had her divorce papers with her to show that she was the aggrieved party in the divorce action. The bride had forgotten the papers and the minister declined to conduct the ceremony.

Later the couple found a justice of the peace and were wedded by him.
